CTA Instructional Leadership Cohort Grows to 7 District Members

Educators are transforming the profession by preparing each other to best handle the new Common Core State Standards and share best practices with each other. After all, professional educators know best what works in the classrooms and what works best to reach all students. With new strategic partnerships and new approaches to professional development, CTA is breaking new ground and is at the forefront of teacher-driven education reforms that will benefit all schools and all students.

The Instructional Leadership Corps (ILC) is a three-year project to build a statewide network of accomplished classroom teachers and other education leaders who will support the implementation of school-wide professional learning on the Common Core Standards in ELA and Mathematics, and the Next Generation Science Standards. The first cohort of 184 educators has been engaged in professional development this year and planning is underway for the second cohort for the 2015-16 school year.

MUSD ILC Members: David Keys (MHS), Gabriela Orzco-Gonzalez (MGE), Gladys Garcia (MGE), Janice Shah (MHS), David Hernandez (LMI), Angelica Paz (LMI), and Helen Meltzer (WGE, principal)
